
The Cutting Edge: Defining the New Basics in Transplantation

Wednesday, March 31, 2010

Radisson University Hotel, 615 Washington Ave SE
Minneapolis, MN 55414

11th Annual Cutting Edge Conference

Sponsored by:

University of Minnesota Medical Center, Fairview
University of Minnesota Amplatz Children's Hospital

Course Overview

Improvements, new discoveries, and new technologies in all aspects of organ transplantation make this dynamic field one of continued interest and excitement. The 2010 Cutting Edge Conference will focus on defining the new basics in transplantation, including complementary and alternative therapies, immunology, cultural diversity, the utilization of palliative care, and emerging infections associated with transplantation.

Audience

This program is ideal for health care professionals involved in the field of adult and/or pediatric organ transplantation.

Program Objectives:

Upon completion of this program, participants should be able to:

- Identify present and potential future trends in transplantation
- Discuss the implications of immunological testing
- Identify two forms of complementary therapies for use with transplant patients
- Describe the influence of culture on transplantation
- Identify the implications of emerging infections in transplantation

- Identify interdisciplinary team members involved in the care of pediatric and adult transplant patients
- Discuss ethical implications in organ allocation
